HUMAN SCIENCES RESEARCH COUNCIL

TENDER No.: HSRC/07/2008/09

CENTRE FOR POVERTY, EMPLOYMENT AND GROWTH

TERMS OF REFERENCE FOR THE PROVISION OF CONSULTANCY SERVICES TO IMPLEMENT THE EMPLOYMENT THROUGH PRIVATE PREFERENTIAL PROCUREMENT AND VALUE CREATION PROJECT

1. Introduction to the Private Preferential Procurement and Value Creation Project

The Codes of Good Practice on BEE issued under the BEE Act and the sector transformation charters have provided strong incentives for companies to achieve BEE and SMME procurement targets. However, many companies are not sure how to procure in order to achieve these targets effectively and efficiently, and there is a need to develop the knowledge base on procurement approaches in this regard.

The Centre for Poverty, Employment and Growth (CPEG) at the HSRC has therefore started an Employment through Private Preferential Procurement¹ and Value Creation Project (the project). CPEG has received funding from the Kellogg Foundation for the project. It is also forming a partnership for the project with the National Business Initiative, which has received funding from USAID for BBEE and SMME development.

The project involves developing and implementing preferential procurement strategies with large companies in the private sector. The objective of the project is to develop and share good practice with regard to procuring in such a way as to promote supplier development, including BBBEE, SMME development and industrial development.

2. Deliverables and timeframes

The project consists of two main components:

1. Demonstration sites through company partnerships, and
2. Knowledge sharing.

The five key project deliverables for the demonstration sites are:

- (a) Form partnerships between the HSRC, DTI, service delivery agents, financial institutions and select large corporations committed to experimenting with alternative strategies to rapidly expand preferential procurement.
- (b) For each corporate partner, document current preferential procurement behaviour and its impact. Compare current behaviour and impact with the stated goals of that corporate partner, as expressed in the Codes of Good Practice or the relevant industry/sector empowerment charter. This will provide a useful indication of the "gap" between strategy goals and strategy impact. The findings will be consolidated into an initial benchmark report for each corporate partner, to be used for evaluation of the project.
- (c) Based on the initial benchmark reports and good practice studies, develop strategies or innovations to be implemented within four main strategic areas:
 - a. Product and service identification: What products and services are most suitable for increasing the impact of preferential procurement; the potential impact of vertical integration; identification of goods for import replacement.
 - b. Procurement management and the associated corporate philosophy: how this affects the efficacy of preferential procurement strategies; allocation of resources and alignment of corporate incentive schemes.
 - c. Beneficiary identification; local (community) based development versus the impact of other models of beneficiary selection.
 - d. The structuring of business support and development services: Maximising the impact of resources allocated to these services.

¹The term "preferential procurement" as used in this document means any procurement practices aimed at furthering BBBEE, SMME and local or national economic development objectives. It is not restricted to the use of a preference points system in the tender adjudication phase of the procurement cycle.

- (d) Set performance indicators and targets (such as volume of preferential procurement, employment, income and asset ownership) and monitor and evaluate the strategies for their impact the performance indicators.
- (e) Produce annual reports, over the 2 years of the project, on learning gained from demonstration sites.

The four key project deliverables for knowledge sharing are:

- (a) Compile a collection of good practice case studies for South Africa. This would include a review of current good practice in the public and private sectors. As the project unfolds, regular case studies from company partnerships will be drawn up for publication by the client. Once again, the focus will be on assessing the gap between the empowerment goals of a particular enterprise/sector/industry and the actual impact that is being made. The key issues to be addressed in these studies are the assessment of the value-add proposition of preferential procurement, from the larger macro-economic perspective, and the identification of good practice preferential procurement.
- (b) Desk-top review of local and global experiences, focusing on issues such as impact on economy, good practice cases, government involvement and support, etc.
- (c) Round table discussions: regular discussion groups with stakeholders and interested parties will be convened to share findings, discuss case studies, etc.
- (d) Put in place and manage a dedicated web-based information service.

The project will be implemented in phases. The first phase was outsourced and it involves putting in place a detailed project plan, with targets and timeframes. This will be done on the basis of a series of initial interviews and/or workshops with key stakeholders and an initial desk-top study. The first draft of the project plan should be in place by December 2008.

This call for proposals is for the second phase of the project and it will invoice implementation of the plan. The plan will be updated regularly and will serve as the management and reporting tool for the project.

The plan should be based on the output of the project being a consolidated report to be produced at the end of the project, for publication by the client. This will consolidate the "best practice guidelines" for maximising the impact of the preferential procurement strategies, and contain detailed and practical information on how to implement these in a range of organisations. Such a report will also enable an understanding of (i) what activities might simply represent benefit displacement rather than benefit creation, and (ii) what the real value adds of preferential procurement may be in terms of employment, incomes, wealth distribution, asset ownership and growth.

The service provider must also undertake to support CPEG's Executive Director in ensuring the sustainability of the project, especially through fund-raising efforts.

3. Reporting

The service provider will be managed by the Executive Director of the CPEG.

4. Duration of the Assignment

The anticipated duration of the project is 3 years.

5. Budget

Only submit daily charge out rates per team member.

6. Location
