2. INTRODUCTION

National Treasury wishes to engage a service provider(s) with the capabilities of mining unstructured item descriptions, extracting item attributes and replies, classifying commodities and developing codification templates.

3. BACKGROUND

The Office of the Chief Procurement Officer (OCPO) within the National Treasury was established to modernize and oversee the South African public sector Supply Chain Management system to ensure that the procurement of goods, services and construction works comply with Section 217 of the Constitution and all relevant legislation. The OCPO is not directly involved in procurement, but leads and manages procurement reform, maintains the procurement system and oversees the way in which government does business with the private sector.

In order for Government to fulfill its social responsibility in terms of the channeling of procurement spend to designated groups and the unlocking of economies of scale in specific areas of government spend, we have to break down the information silos that have formed across all spheres of government due to the lack of a commonly used procurement language on transactional level.

The structured codification of procurement item descriptions linked to a commonly used classification structure will breach the various gaps in the procurement information divide and will allow for the seamless flow of electronic information between distributed applications. This will also assist suppliers from designated groups to identify opportunities that will allow them meaningful participation in the mainstream economy.

The project will aim to change the current disparate government wide procurement spend data view into a standardised focused view which will serve as a platform from which various innovative procurement reform initiatives will be launched. Our three main focus areas to achieve this is:

Procurement spend visualization

 Change the current disparate government wide procurement spend data view into a standardized focused view which will serve as a platform from which various innovative procurement reform initiatives will be launched.

· Data analysis

 Provide standardized, structured and enriched procurement data to a wide audience of users and applications in the form of useable procurement information.

Classification and Codification Standard

 Define a common procurement data language between a multitudes of applications that will enable the seamless electronic flow of data throughout all the spheres of government.

Of the three focus areas the most important one is the establishing of a government wide codification standard for the creation of structured procurement item descriptions on the most granular level that will be used on a transactional level across all government entities. The codification standard will consist of centrally maintained templates per commodity, linked to the UNSPSC classification standard and will be formally approved by the newly established Codification Board. The creation of procurement item descriptions will be decentralized to the respective end-users that will use the codification standard as a meta data structure together with the concept of structured text to formulate standardized, structured purchase order descriptions. Control of data integrity will be ensured by the central approval of all newly created records.

This solution however implies a baseline of templates with a certain level maturity in terms of commodity coverage, completeness and granularity.

This engagement is therefore an attempt to establish a baseline of codification templates through the process of extracting attributes and replies from existing, unstructured supply chain transactional data to identify and create new templates per commodity and also to enrich existing templates.

4. SCOPE OF WORK

The scope of work includes all activities relating to the extraction of attributes and replies from a set of unstructured supply chain transactional data and the development of standardized codification templates.

4.1 COMMODITY MAPPING

All unstructured item descriptions are linked to the LOGIS Management Information Item Number (MIIN) structure. The MIIN structure is two level hierarchical classification taxonomy with approximately 17000 unique commodities (Object or Object-qualifier level) on the second level, that are actively used throughout government. The second level of the MIIN structure must be mapped to the commodity level (lowest level) of the UNSPSC classification structure. The UNSPSC commodity level must be grouped or expanded to a codification template level depending on the nature of the commodity.

4.2 DATA EXTRACTION

Transaction data that includes item descriptions must be extracted from the LOGIS application on a commodity level (MIIN second level). These datasets must be imported in a tool or database to allow for the identification and extraction of descriptive attributes and their respective replies.

4.3 EXTRACTING ATTRIBUTES AND REPLIES

The item descriptions linked to the 17000 MIIN commodities vary in granularity between government departments based on their respective needs for the uniqueness of a specific item. The same item might therefore be described with different attributes as well as a varying number of attributes between departments, depending on their respective environments and their deployment of the item. The sequencing of attributes also differs between departments. All attributes with their respective replies must be extracted against each MIIN commodity.

4.4 BUILDING STANDARDIZED TEMPLATES

A codification standard includes the following:

- Defined Object/Noun/Approved item name linked to a codification template or Short Item Description Pattern (SIDP) which form the codification standard that will be endorsed by the Codification Board;
- Defined attributes linked to the Object/Noun/Approved item name;
- Defined replies linked to the individual attributes;
- Defined sequence of attributes to derive the item description pattern; and

 Functional data linked to the specific item description e.g. storage requirements, unit of issue, etc.

The extracted attributes and replies must be normalized, enriched, standardized and sequenced in the form of a template that can be consumed by downstream supply chain applications for the purpose of item description creations.

4.5 MAINTAIN TEMPLATE INTEGRITY

Processes must be put in place to monitor and coordinate the progress of the attribute- and reply extraction effort as well as to manage and monitor the work flow of the template approval process between the Codification Board and the team of codification resources.

5. OUTPUTS, DELIVERABLES AND ACTIVITIES OF RESOURCES

The codification templates must support two methods of item description creation, either the Descriptive pattern- or Reference pattern methods depending on the nature of the commodity.

The Descriptive Method of item identification in which the item of supply is fully described in words with respect to its physical and performance attributes. This method may not include a reference to the manufacturer or designer. The definition means that the description pattern is used for identifying items of supply which are describable in words, so that the physical and performance data forms the basis of the item identification.

The Reference Method is an indirect method of item identification used for items of supply which are not describable in words, and where the manufacturer and his part or drawing number supported by some technical data forms the basis of the item identification.

It is clear from these definitions that, contrary to the Descriptive Pattern where the basis of the item identification is formed mainly by the technical description in words (and also may include a reference number), that the basis of the item identification on the Reference Pattern is formed mainly by the references of the manufacturer or designer.

The skills required for building the government codification standard (templates) to support the fore-mentioned two item identification methods is different from the skills required to codify items using a codification standard. The following outputs and deliverables can only be achieved by resources with many years of experience in the structured codification of item descriptions and an in-depth understanding of government procurement data:

 Determine the classification level of the 17000 MIIN second level commodities for which templates must be created

- a. Perform a mapping between the UNSPSC structure and the MIIN structure
- b. Consolidate or expand the UNSPSC commodity level to a level that will serve as "fifth codification level" against which templates will be created. In some instances the UNSPSC commodity will be equal the Object/Noun/Approved item name for which a template can be created and some instances Qualifiers/Modifiers need to be added to the UNSPSC commodity level to create a lower than commodity level to create templates.
- b) Identifying attributes and replies from extracted transactional data linked to the 17000 MIIN commodities
 - a. Derive descriptive attributes from attribute replies used in item descriptions
 e.g. Description: Red socks Descriptive attribute: Colour Attribute reply:
 Red
 - b. Determine which attributes must be mandatory and which must be discretionary based on the current use thereof in the transactional data descriptions.
- c) Enriching attributes and replies per template
 - a. Depending on the type of commodity, attributes and replies must be enriched from the NATO Item Identification Guides and Master Requirement Codes or existing templates from the ECCMA e-OTD.
 - b. Contact departmental users and commodity managers to clarify specific attributes and replies especially in the case of highly technical commodities.
- d) Determine the sequencing of attributes per template to create structured, standardized item descriptions
 - a. Decide on the sequence of attributes that will form the item identification pattern for the codified item description. The sequencing will be based on the resources' experience of how the item descriptions are used in the government environment for procurement, asset management and stock control purposes
 - b. Obtain user input and confirmation of sequencing from affected users.
- e) Building and populating the baseline set of codification templates
 - a. Classify the template to the UNSPCS taxonomy
 - b. Create the set of mandatory and discretionary attributes relating to the template with their corresponding replies
 - c. Determine the item description ontology through the sequencing of the attributes.
 - d. Facilitate the approval of templates by the Codification Board
 - e. Manage the distribution and updates of templates to downstream systems.

6. EXPERIENCE AND QUALIFICATIONS OF RESOURCES

The potential service provider(s) should make available three full-time, onsite, technical resources with the following experience and qualifications:

- Must be a qualified NATO codifier. NATO certificate to be attached to each of the three CVs (as issued by the National Codification Bureau).
- b) Should have an average of 5 years' practical experience in creating purchase order item descriptions using the NATO codification standard after the obtaining of the NATO certificate. In this regard, managing of cataloguing personnel or projects that are using the NATO codification standard will not be accepted as practical NATO codification experience.
- c) Should have an average of 5 years' experience in the government codification and supply chain environment within the previous 10 years.
- d) Should have a workable knowledge of the e-OTD cataloguing standard.
- e) Should have a workable knowledge of the UNSPSC classification standard.
- f) Resources should be available throughout duration of the contract

CERTIFICATE OF INDEPENDENT BID DETERMINATION

- 1 This Standard Bidding Document (SBD) must form part of all bids¹ invited.
- Section 4 (1) (b) (iii) of the Competition Act No. 89 of 1998, as amended, prohibits an agreement between, or concerted practice by, firms, or a decision by an association of firms, if it is between parties in a horizontal relationship and if it involves collusive bidding (or bid rigging).² Collusive bidding is a pe se prohibition meaning that it cannot be justified under any grounds.
- Treasury Regulation 16A9 prescribes that accounting officers and accounting authorities must take all reasonable steps to prevent abuse of the supply chain management system and authorizes accounting officers and accounting authorities to:
 - a. disregard the bid of any bidder if that bidder, or any of its directors have abused the institution's supply chain management system and or committed fraud or any other improper conduct in relation to such system.
 - cancel a contract awarded to a supplier of goods and services if the supplier committed any corrupt or fraudulent act during the bidding process or the execution of that contract.
- This SBD serves as a certificate of declaration that would be used by institutions to ensure that, when bids are considered, reasonable steps are taken to prevent any form of bid-rigging.
- In order to give effect to the above, the attached Certificate of Bid Determination (SBD 9) must be completed and submitted with the bid:

² Bid rigging (or collusive bidding) occurs when businesses, that would otherwise be expected to compete, secretly conspire to raise prices or lower the quality of goods and / or services for purchasers who wish to acquire goods and / or services through a bidding process. Bid rigging is, therefore, an agreement between competitors not to compete.
